Gifts/Faults

Stage Presence - She has the ability to perform with great flair and only mild nerves. This is true for most circumstances including interviews, hearings, and other stressful situations. Most attribute this to her Sung heritage, but she attributes it to her years of instrumental work.

Pace - The Sung have a different sense of time than the rest of the human population. Not having to sleep as often (allowing their bodies to partially shut down, giving rest where it is needed) allows the Sung an additional 8 or so hours of activity. This has changed their outlook on time, and they are much more willing to slow down their pace knowing that they have effectively more time to get things done. This is both a gift...and a flaw.

Fawcett's Syndrome - Also known as being Sung, this syndrome is associated with the subject's decreased sensitivity to social norms and the inability to recognize basic social cues, much in the manner of Asperger's Syndrome of the 20th and 21st century. Prolonged, intense social interaction requires that a will power check be made against a -1 for every hour under social duress. If the total of the modifier and roll is less than 0 ALL rolls made by that player suffer a -1 penalty. If the social duress continues a will check is made at the next hour, and if that check fails, another -1 modifier is added, and so on. These modifiers go away at a rate of one increment for every two hours of non-intensive interaction or rest.
