

Marge-R-ETT

Marge-R is a sweet old lady. Well, okay, she's not that old, but she's older than most clones ever get to be, and even has gray hair. She is also a little plump, which is also very unusually. She is very protective and mothering. The Computer is her baby—her pride and joy. Secretly, she recognizes that the Computer is not perfect, but she would never, EVER, admit that to anyone else.

Service Group: HPD&MC. Marge comes from Housing Preservation and Development & Mind Control. She is part of the service sector and works in food development, trying to find new blends of food and medication that will be at least edible and keep the workers passive.

Secret Society: Anti-Mutant. Marge feels that mutants are just a horrible disgrace and should be eliminated. It's almost as if she feels that mutants are just an ugly mistake the Computer made, and she's doing her best to help cover it up.

Mutant Power: Emotion Control. With concentration, Marge can project emotions onto other clones. The only one she's really good at so far is guilt, but with a little effort, she could certainly try others. Deep down, Marge recognizes that she herself is a mutant, but tries to convince herself she's not. She tells herself that she's just very persuasive, that's all.

Skills & Abilities: Marge is not very quick or strong, but she's smart and she's pushy and she's pretty tough for an old broad. She can work wonders with any kind of food or food-like product. She also has a vast knowledge of most medications provided by the Computer. Her combat skills are not so good, but at least she knows which way to point a laser. She knows basic first aid, and in a pinch she can operate some basic bots—specifically scrubbots and jackobots.

Equipment:

Standard issue RED uniform

Laser pistol

2 RED laser barrels

Notebook

Pen

Comm Unit I

Several plastic packets of food samples she's been working on

A bottle with various pills

8 SleepyTime

4 Up-and-at-'ems

3 Laxative tablets

2 Visomorpain pain killers